Hello [REDACTED],

My name is Grant, I have become somewhat of a celebrity for something I never did and for something that has robbed me of my entire family and life. My time in jail has been nothing but depressing because of these and many other factors. Fortunately for you, I am not writing this letter to you to tell you about my life and troubles but to offer you a glimpse at the way your Bryan has made jail a slightly more enjoyable experience.

When Bryan first arrived in the Pod, I was shocked at how we nearly instantly hit it off. It was nice to have someone in here who wasn't an uneducated mindless bore. I being a CRNA and him being a medic gave me and him an outlet to discuss/share our medical stories. In addition to this, he instantly mentioned you and shared how excited he was about the coming baby. He also shared how much he wanted a girl and; of course, we went on medical and broke down the genealogy of the families to help decypher what the gender of the baby would be. I assured him it would just have to be a girl but he wanted to get the whole pod involved and created a list of everyone's guess. When the news arrived, the smile on his face was undeniable and it wasn't just because it was going to be a girl; it was also because it was going to be with a woman he loves and longs to be with everyday or you. I know this because we share stories about our girlfriends everyday. I am sure you have heard the terrible things about me and my girlfriend that the media have lied about. Being able to share my stories about her with Bryan and getting to hear all about you has been an enjoyable and therapeutic experience for us both. Unfortunately for me, I can't contact the woman I love while I am in here, but whenever Bryan reads something you have written, spoken with you on the phone, seen your pictures, or simply thinks of you; his mood instantly improves. ~~_____~~

I know the pain of being separated from the woman you love and I know that a day does not go by that he doesn't think of you or the little princess living within you. Whether you wish to believe the words I say or not, I just want you to know how important you truly are to him. I have met so many guys who are douchebags and hide their feelings about their love and it is refreshing to finally meet a guy like Bryan who can be straight and honest about his feelings about the woman he loves. Before you start thinking he is an endless record only talking about you; he is not. Bryan has made me and the guys laugh with all his crazy music and other personal stories. We have even decided to take a cruise once all this jail stuff is behind us (You and him with my girl and I).

This is a scary time for all of us and all that I know is that we have to hold onto and cherish the ones we love most. While I do not claim to be an expert on all matters related to love and relationships, I am confident in my assumption that Bryan can't wait to see you again and get back to his life with you. He has shared his shortcomings with me and his errors and he sincerely wants to move past all this with you by his side. I am man enough to say that my girl is my world (especially after the loss of my family that I am being wrongfully accused of causing) and he has said that you are his many...many...many times. Trust me, it is rare to find a guy who is like him.

I do not know why I chose to write you this letter. Maybe it is because I know that you are going through a rough time right now. Maybe it is because I know that Bryan is going through a scary situation right now. Hell, maybe it is because he talks about you so much that I feel like I know you enough to share my thoughts with you. What I do know is that you already know all these things and more about him and the way he feels about you. This is but a small hurdle in both your lives and as long as you get through it together, the future will be bright. Bryan has told me the things he will work on once this situation is behind him. All that he wants is to get back to his life with you and his new little girl you are bringing to him.

I apologize for any times that I was too forward or repetitive, but there is literally nothing else to do in here and it is nice to be able to do something that I feel is meaningful. I hope the day comes soon where we can go on this cruise and share even more stories together. Bryan is a great guy and you sound like an amazing woman. If I can ask one thing from you, don't believe what the media says about me. Bryan was kind enough to believe me about my innocence in this, I'd love for you to believe it as well.

P.S. Speak of the devil, Bryan just came into my cell and made me laugh with one of his jokes. The man should seriously be a stand-up comedian.

Sincerely,

Grant
